Traveler's Notes

TC Steele State Historic Site

When Indiana became a state in 1816, Corydon was made its first capital. Here the constitutional convention drew up a blueprint for government in the limestone capitol, which still stands near the town square. Nearby are the 1817 Thomas Posey House and the oldest building in Corydon, the 1800 Branham Tavern, which is constructed of logs.

To the south of town is Battle of Corydon Memorial Park, where Indiana's only Civil War battle took place. The battle ended with the state's home guard surrendering to a much larger force of Confederate soldiers after a brief skirmish. The occupation did not last long.

A gathering place for artists, Nashville has antique shops, art galleries, and craft stores. Taste the famous fried biscuits at Nashville House, listen to the spinners of tall tales on Liar's Bench outside the old courthouse, and in June attend the Bill Monroe Memorial Bean Blossom Bluegrass Festival.

Facts & More Information To Plan Your Trip!

Starve Hollow State Recreation Area

- Bloomington: Tree-lined avenues with a wide selection of shops and restaurants crisscross Bloomington, an energetic town known for its architecture, art, outdoor fun and local wines.
- T.C. Steele State Historic Site: Offers tours of the studio and home of early Hoosier artist T.C. Steele. Inspiring gardens and trails developed by his wife Selma.
- Nashville: An historic artists colony located in the mystical blue hills of Brown County Indiana.
- Brown County State Park: Nicknamed the "Little Smokies" because of the area's resemblance to the Great Smoky Mountains, Brown County encompasses nearly 16,000 acres of rugged hills, ridges and fog-shrouded ravines.
- Story: The village of Story itself was founded in 1851, with the grant of a land patent from President Millard Fillmore to Dr. George Story. This original land patent is on display at the Story Inn.
- Starve Hollow State Rec Area: The 280-acre recreation area was created from part of the larger Jackson-Washington State Forest. The area offers fishing, swimming, hiking, and a nature center.
- Corydon: Be sure to visit the Battle of Corydon Memorial Park, commemorating the only Civil War battle fought on Indiana soil, which took place on July 9, 1863.
- Squire Boone Caverns: The park consists of a one-hour walking tour into the caverns, as well as a working pioneer village and grist mill.
